The rebel organ yesterday morning took ground (in favor of dropping all the multitudinous titles under which the party has lately been doing business, and adhering strictly in the fusion seems to be well fixed that under no name can Democrats battle as earnestly or so successfully as their own."
There is none, it says, "so inspiring, so cheering, or so thrilling." It therefore goes in for unfurling "to the breeze the grand old title of Democracy." We have always told our readers that under all its disguises and all its new fangled prænomens, such as "Conservative," "National Union," "White organization that confronted the Union men of the country, was the same old pro-slavery and pro-rebel party that existed at the breaking out of the war, and that was deeply responsible for and sympathetic with secession and treason. Great efforts were made here and there by its managers to hide the cloyen foot, but in every locality where there was a a sure "Democratic" majority, the dised follower of Vallandigham was nominsted. In States like West Virginia they discarded pot only the name of Democracy, but the men of that party, and nominated an old. Know Nothing ticket, in the hopes that it might open the way for the election of the simon pures to power. The rebel organ is disgusted with the flat failure of that trick. The people saw the same old ears under the new skin, and they stood disgusted with the flat failure of that tricks. The people's saw the same old ears under the new skin, and they stood aloof from the anclean animal just the same as ever.

The robel organ is entirely mistaken about the name of Themocracy having any longer its old power to charm and delude the masses. So far from that, they now regard it as a synonym for treason and rebellion. The element in the party that did not sympathize with the South and Secession, stoughed off at the commencement of the war, and became identified with the Union party. And there it is to-day. True, there are individual exceptions, so few and scattered, however, as to only prove the general rule. The fact is that the name of "Democracy" is thoroughly odious to the great majority of the people. They know what feeds have been ole. They know what deeds have b one in that name. Look how they the recent elections. Is there anything to indicate that the people will change about and re-embrace Democracy under

The War between the Express and Telegraph Companies. The war between the express companies is still carried on. The new Mer-chants' Union claims to be paying exchants' Union claims to be paying expenses at rates 25 to 40 per cent less than the old ones, and is opening routes all over the West. On the other hand the monopolists give out that the Merchants' Union is losing $5,000 a day, and, tiring of such waste, is making overtures to the old 'uns to be bought out. These insinuations are indignantly repudiated by the new opposition.

Think you cood rite serenely in this posish? I guess not. If you cood twood twood and the new anything more sublime or pathetick than.

War to the knife" is now the cry, the American, Adams and United States companies uniting to crush the Mer-chants' Union. The old companies companies uniting to crush the Merchants' Union. The old companies make large reductions in their rates on every line where the new one competes with them, but hold them up atinfy, it they do not increase them, on all other routes. The Merchants' Union has public sympathy decidedly on their side, but the old companies think they have something which is better in a fight like this, namely, the longest purse. The three old companies are one in their war upon the Merchants' Union, and negotiations are afoot to make them one in fact. The consolidation would make it harder than ever for the Merchants' Union to succeed; but the indisputable fact remains that the country would be better and more cheaply served by two great companies than by one. One significant effect of the new opposition is the depreciation of the old companies stock. In four weeks Adams has dropped from 104½ to 85, American from 100 to 86, and United States from 108 to 85. Consolidation is the order of the day. Wells, Kargo at Co. have just swept across the continent from the Western coast to the Missouri river, combining all the companies doing business in the territories. Among other interests thus absorbed are those formerly constrolled by the Helladay company, the Picaneer stage line, the owarland company and the American and United States expresses, for all fusiness west of the Missouri. By means of the line of the Padic Mail steamship company to the Sandwich Islands, Japan and China the business of the new company with be intime extended to all parts of the East Indies. The Short Skirt Improvement-The

BY DIO LEWIS, M. D.

This subject is vitally important. Beside it, diet, exercise and baths sink into insignificance. My pale faced countrywomen are dying for lack of room, freedom; they are being stifled.

Dress Reformers proclaim short skirts as the remedy. This is well. The short skirt is an improvement—a movement upward, but of no consequence compared with the readjustment of the dress about the middle of the body. That part contains the vital organs. Is a man strong? It is because the middle ly dressed so as to maintain a healthy circulation.

3. The skirts to fall to the knee.

I have said that the importance of these several changes is in the order named. The lungs, heart, liver and stomach, which together make up the fountain of life, must have room, or the vital forces must halt. With the corset and tight-lacing, these organs are reduced one-third in size and two-thirds in motion.

Heatth and equilibrium of circulation are interchangeable terms. Whosoever, whatever living thing, either animal or vegetable, has defective circulation has defective health. Flannels, cotton padding, thick shawls, cloaks and furspiled upon the chest, while the legs are covered with a single thickness of cotton cloth surrounded by a baloon in the shape of a hoop, steams the chest and freezes the legs. The legs and arms, separated so far from the center of the body, surrounded by the cold air, need, to say the least, as much clothing as the body, surrounded by the cold air, need, to say the least, as much clothing as the body, and ought to have one or, in cold weather in this climate, two thicks, nesses of knit woolen. Women complain to me of headache, tell me their blood is all in their head and chest, while their feet are as cold as ice. With the fishionable dress how can it be otherwise? Let them cover the limbs with one or two thicknesses of warm Health and equilibrium of circulation while their feet are as cold as ice. With the fishionable dress how can it be otherwise? Let them cover the limbs with one or two thicknesses of warm flannel, and the feet with a warm dress, and the head and chest will be immodiately relieved.

The short skirts, although in importance to health the least vital of these three changes, is nevertheless very important. The skirt should fall a little below the knee. The pants should be the large Turkish pants, which, made long enough to fall to the ankle, and fastened at the bottom by being drawn close about the ankle with a slight classic cord, should then be drawn up to the place usually occupied by the garter, and pulled down to the middle, or a little below the middle of the calf of the leg. When going out into the cold air the exposed part of the leg should be covered with a patent leather anklet, and during the cold season of the year that part of the leg should be covered with two thicknesses of woolen. While all this peculiar arrangement is, in point of convenience and protection, less satisfactory than the straight pants, such example: In my school at Lexingt Mass., I had more than a hi dred fashionable young ladies I winter, all of whom we constantly during the school year short dress, the gymnastic costun-while all the fashionable ladies of a village outside of the institution, ado ed the same dress. Indeed, it is alm rare to see in Lexington. of musquitoes is healthy. Does he put it on the ground of the irritation it produces?

Her impatient spirit would listen to no further delay. At once inquiries were presecuted among her German friends. One of them knew Casper. He was a tall, good-looking young man. He had left his home in Germany only a year before, and had been vainly searching throughout the west for some lost friend. His face wore a deep, thoughtful look, as if there had been grief connected with his history, and indeed, the friend had often heard Casper speak of some bright angel which had left him years before, and was now lost to him forever. He was single too, She had heard him declare that, having lost her, he should never marry.

Twas he—she knew it—felt it. After so ong an absence he had some back to ong an absence he had some back to eer. She was yet young and by no neans ugly. An I she had but to see alim—to talk with him a moment—all its old love would return, and burn as they would float down life's sea, so happy.

The thought made her impatient. She would surprise Casper. While he thought she was dead or wedded to another, she would appear before him, and win him back to a new and stronger desire to live for her, as she only cared now to live for him. The friend assisted, and behold Kate, her heart fluttering furiously, yet light and happy withal, as she stood on the threshold of Casper's door. Lightly she entered the apartment. He sat at a table—his back towards her, his face buried in his hands, and Kate heard a sob which seemed to come from the innermost recesses of his heart.

"Oh! God," she thought, "and all this for me. He has been so true—so devoted all these long years."

She stepped up and lightly togethed.
